Soft skills are important abilities that help people communicate and work well with others. They are useful in many different jobs and situations. Some common soft skills are communication, teamwork, creativity, problem solving and time management. Hard skills are different because they are connected with specific jobs and usually require special knowledge.

The term “soft skills” first appeared in the United States in the early 1970s. Later, it became popular in business and education. Today employers pay a lot of attention to these skills. They understand that professional knowledge alone is not always enough for successful work.

People who can communicate clearly, solve problems and work as part of a team are often more successful at work. For this reason, having a good combination of hard and soft skills may help a person find a job and develop their career.

A currency is a system of money that people use in a particular country or region. The British pound, the euro, the Japanese yen and the US dollar are well-known examples. People use currencies to pay for goods and services, save money and trade with other countries. The value of one currency compared with another can change over time.

In recent years, digital currencies have become increasingly common. Some countries are considering digital forms of their national currencies. Cryptocurrencies, such as Bitcoin, are different because they are not usually issued by a government or central bank.

Digital currencies offer new ways to make payments, but they also create certain risks. Governments are concerned that some cryptocurrencies can be used for illegal activities. As a result, many countries are developing rules for their use.

Ecotourism is a form of travel to natural areas that aims to protect the environment and support local people. It became increasingly popular in the 1980s as more travellers began to think about the effects of tourism on nature.

Ecotourists often visit places where wildlife, plants and local culture are the main attractions. Responsible tours try to cause as little damage as possible. They may encourage visitors to save water and energy, recycle waste and respect local traditions.

Ecotourism can also create jobs and bring money to local communities. However, it is not always completely harmless. Large numbers of visitors may still damage natural areas or disturb wildlife. For this reason, ecotourism needs careful planning if it is to benefit both travellers and the places they visit.

The Notting Hill Carnival is a famous street festival held in London every year. It began in the 1960s and usually takes place during the August Bank Holiday weekend. The event has strong Caribbean roots and celebrates music, dance, food and culture.

During the carnival, the streets of Notting Hill are filled with colourful costumes, live music and large crowds. Visitors can watch parades, listen to different styles of Caribbean music and try traditional food from street stalls.

The carnival has become one of the largest street festivals in Europe and attracts visitors from Britain and other countries. It is also important to London's economy because local shops, restaurants and food sellers benefit from the large number of people who attend the event.

Friendship is a close relationship between people who enjoy spending time together and care about each other. Friends often share interests, experiences and feelings. They can also provide help and support during difficult times.

Ideas about friendship may differ between cultures. In some countries, people use the word "friend" only for a small number of close relationships. In others, people may describe many different people as friends while having only one or two best friends.

Friendship has attracted the attention of researchers in psychology, sociology and other fields. Studies suggest that strong social relationships can have a positive effect on people's lives. Although friendships may change over time, trust, support and mutual respect remain important features of a close friendship.

Artificial intelligence, or AI, is technology that allows computer systems to perform tasks that normally require human intelligence. Such systems can learn from information, recognize patterns, understand language and make decisions.

Research into machine intelligence began many decades ago. In 1956, artificial intelligence became an academic field of study. Since then, computers have become much more powerful, and AI has developed rapidly.

Today AI is used in many areas of life. Search engines, translation services, recommendation systems and some cars use artificial intelligence. It can also help scientists analyse large amounts of information. At the same time, the growing use of AI raises important questions about privacy, safety and responsibility. Researchers and governments are now discussing how the technology can be used safely and effectively.

Space exploration is the study of outer space with the help of science and technology. Scientists use telescopes, robotic spacecraft and human space missions to learn more about planets, stars and other objects beyond Earth.

Modern space exploration developed rapidly during the twentieth century. The Soviet Union and the United States competed in what became known as the Space Race. In 1957, the Soviet Union sent the first satellite into orbit. Four years later, Yuri Gagarin became the first human to travel into space.

Over time, space programmes began to focus more on international cooperation. One important example is the International Space Station, where astronauts from different countries have worked together. Today scientists continue to explore space and develop technology for future missions to the Moon, Mars and beyond.

Writing has played an important role in human history. Before people could record information, they had to remember stories, events and practical knowledge. As societies became more complex, writing made it possible to store and share information more easily.

The earliest forms of writing appeared thousands of years ago. People first made marks on materials such as stone, clay and wood. Later they used different tools, including brushes and simple pens. Over time, writing instruments became more comfortable and effective.

Modern pens are very different from the tools used by our ancestors, but their basic purpose remains the same. Even though people now use computers and smartphones to communicate, pens are still widely used at school, at work and in everyday life.

Convenience food is food that has been prepared so that it can be eaten or cooked quickly and easily. It includes products such as frozen meals, canned food, snacks and ready-made dishes. These foods are popular because they can save people time.

The types of convenience food available differ from country to country. Modern supermarkets offer a very wide choice, from prepared vegetables and soups to frozen pizza and desserts.

However, convenience food has also received criticism. Some products contain large amounts of salt, sugar or fat, and eating too much of them may be unhealthy. Packaging can also create additional waste. For this reason, consumers are often advised to check food labels and include fresh, nutritious products in their diet as well.

Pigeons have lived close to humans for thousands of years. They may have been among the first birds to be domesticated. In the past, people trained pigeons to carry messages because the birds could travel quickly and find their way home over long distances.

Today pigeons are common in cities around the world. They mainly eat grains and seeds, but city pigeons also eat food left by people. Urban areas provide them with plenty of places to find food, water and shelter.

Buildings, bridges and rooftops are similar to the rocky places where pigeons naturally build their nests. Cities also have relatively few natural predators. These conditions help explain why pigeons have adapted so successfully to urban life and can be seen in almost every large city.

Task 4

Prep: 2.5 min | Speak: 3 min

Imagine that you and your friend are doing a school project "Unusual Sports". You have found some photos to illustrate it but for technical reasons you cannot send them now. Leave a voice message to your friend explaining your choice of the photos and sharing some ideas about the project. In 2.5 minutes be ready to:

- explain the choice of the illustrations for the project by briefly describing them and noting the differences;
- mention the advantages (1–2) of the two unusual kinds of sports;
- mention the disadvantages (1–2) of the two unusual kinds of sports;
- express your opinion on the subject of the project – which unusual kind of sports you would prefer to try and why.

You will speak for not more than 3 minutes (12–15 sentences). You have to talk continuously.
